Who Was Alisher Navoi?

Alisher Navoi (1441–1501) was born in the city of Navoi, in the Fergana Valley, and is widely regarded as the father of Uzbek literature. Writing in Chagatai, a Turkic literary language, Navoi composed poems, plays, and philosophical treatises that explored themes such as love, morality, and the human condition. His works were not only artistically profound but also politically astute, as he served as a vizier in the Timurid court, promoting cultural and intellectual development.

Navoi's influence extended beyond the borders of his homeland. He is celebrated in Central Asia, the Middle East, and even in Persian literary circles. His most famous works, including the epic Alisher Navoi's Qahramon and the collection of poems Divan, are studied in universities worldwide. Navoi's emphasis on humanism, rational thought, and aesthetic beauty continues to inspire poets, scholars, and artists.
